

Mini Project Presentations - Monday 22nd February

Hello, and congratulations on making it this far! You will soon be partaking in the mini project presentation session, which means you will be presenting all of the hard work you've put into your application over the past six weeks. You'll be joined by a variety of faces, including those from Generation, The Prince's Trust and Infinity Works.

On the day, the class will be split into two breakout rooms, with your instructor leading one group, and the rotating instructor. Each person will be allocated 15 minutes. 5-10 minutes are set aside for a demonstration of your project, alongside the presentation itself. The final 5 minutes are reserved for questions by the audience.

For the presentation structure, you will not be given a lot to work, other than what type of content you should include. This is to allow you to push yourself as a creative thinker. Here is an example structure of the presentation:

- A bit about yourself
- Background to the project
- How you went about implementing the application
- Demonstration of application
- What went well / What you're proud of achieving
- What problems you faced
- What you would have liked to have implemented for the future
- What you would do to approach it differently next time
- Closing remarks

You can use this as a template, but you are free to structure in a way you deem best.

Finally, make absolutely sure that you do not continue to add features to your application that may cause it to become unstable. Try and have the application mostly wrapped up by the Friday before. There is no problem in fixing bugs or updating outputs, just don't add new features!

Good luck on the day, you'll do amazing and will hopefully have fun in the process!
